PRODUCTS: STUDIO FREE

You will need to create a user account before you begin designing and sharing business processes in Studio Creatio, free edition. Once you have a user account, you can begin designing processes, collaborate with other users on their processes, or invite them to your team.

There are two ways to create an account in Creatio studio free:

- Receive an invitation. Your colleagues or associates may invite you to participate in their projects via an invitation page in their organization account settings. Click the link in the invitation email to finish your registration. As a result, you will join an organization account to collaborate on business process development.
- Self-registration. You can complete the steps below to sign up for Studio Creatio, free edition, on your own. As a result, you will become an administrator of a new organization account – a team that can collaborate on business process development. In this case, you will be able to send invitations to join your team. Learn more about collaboration in the “Collaborate in Studio Free” article. Self-registration is described below.

Attention. Make sure you have access to your registration email: you will need to use it for account verification and password restoration purposes.

To sign up:

1. Go to the Studio Creatio, free edition, registration page.
2. Enter your email and password and click [Sign up].
